Traveling through Southern Florida, just north of Miami, today, but sunshine below down on tomato vines, potato fields and citrus groves. Negro men and women working in the fields make you realize what the patient labor of the Negro race means to the South.

In this intense sunlight of peaceful calm it is hard to realize conditions that overwhelm other parts of this gigantic country—floods, hail, snow, dust storms, tornadoes and lightning in Memphis, knocking one floor out of a hotel.

Any new deal spending policy money without taking strange freaks of nature into account runs risks, or discourages little pigs, or discourages wheat planting, and may face a shortage of wheat and pigs. Suppose old Pharaoh had not down on wheat planting to raise prices, just before the "seven lean years" began.

At the Miami station appears Ben Smith, marvelously energetic young person, who reminds you of Satchin in the book of Job who says he comes "from going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it," only Ben Smith flies, instead of walking.

Just back from a 15,000 mile flying trip in, around and across South America, looking for more gold mines that he doesn't need, Mr. Smith, equally well known in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Seattle, British Columbia, wherever there are mines, says "Many undiscovered gold deposits in South America." "Mining youth," complaining of few opportunities, might look for some of those mines. There are also diamonds, plenty of them. In Brazil, if you can find them.

Kemal Pasha, "farthest east" dictator, proposes to fortify the Dardanelles. Istanbul, formerly Constantinople, which still belongs to Turkey, is on one side of that narrow water-strait, separating Europe and Asia. Turkey owns both sides. Head of the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" is the chapter about Constantinople, the most description of the Dardanelles, once the most important body of water in the world.

If Turkey fortifies that straitway, which is Russia's only seaward from her south-eastern inland sea into the Mediterranean, Stalin might say something unpleasant to his fellow dictator, Kemal.

England, whose influence at Versailles permitted Turkey to keep Constantinople because England wished to oblige the Axis Khan and other Mohammedan subjects, permitted no Dardanelles fortification the day of the Turkish Sultan. That Caliph might bow-string his lady love and throw them in the Bosphorus, but he was not allowed to mount cannon.

England held the key to the Mediterranean at Gibraltar, the last of the eastern empire, the last of the British empire, the last of the British empire.

It is a new, interesting world, although some early primitives live in the past like the old English king who offered special rewards for fine new furs to make bows for British archers because of the new fangled powder and bullets would never be important in a war.

MISS VERA STRETZ
"Office Wife" in Dramatic Trial

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

New York, March 26 (U.S.)—Blond Vera Stretz held the muzzle of her black 32-caliber revolver less than eight inches from her married sweetheart, Dr. Fritz Gebhardt, when the blazed away at him in his apartment on the 21st floor of the fashionable Beaman Towers shortly after 2 a. m. on November 12.

Testimony to this effect was given today by Sergeant Harry Butts, head of New York's ballistic bureau, in response to questions by Prosecutor Miles O'Brien.

O'Brien wanted to know from Butts how far the bullet was fired from a distance of a gun such as was found on the skin. Four bullets were fired into Gebhardt's body.

"Less than eight inches" any way," Butts replied.

IDENTITIES NIGHTGOWN

If first nearer than three inches away the shot would have a burn, he said.

Earlier Vera had wept over testimony and sight of the gown.

"Harry Schwartz, assistant to the chief medical examiner, identified parts of the pink silk nightgown found in Vera's handbag."

He also examined the brain of the slain Gebhardt and found no alcoholic content.

Detective James Knott testified he was one of the officers at the scene the night of the crime. He went to Vera's room, No. 1912, and found a black gown, a black leather coat and a black hat.

An Italian newspaper printed a cartoon showing conditions below the surface of the Mediterranean with every fish wearing a British army cap, or some British garment, one large fish.

TOWNSEND IS GOV. HOFFMAN

TESTS DRUGS IN HOUSE

Washington, March 26 (AP)—Dr. E. E. Townsend, with whom he has split because of "differences," today was termed "a brilliant man and a physician of note" by Robert E. Clements, co-founder of the Townsend old-age pension movement.

He was the first witness in the $50,000 House investigation of the Townsend old-age pension movement from which committee members have promised "startling" revelations.

Clements resigned the post as secretary of the Townsend organization.

CROWD ON HAND

A throng of spectators made a big Capitol square scene as the 45-year-old California began to reply to questions of June 2.

Sullivan, committee counsel, said he first became acquainted with Dr. Townsend about 1926 or 1927 in Long Beach, Cal.

Townsend, Clements testified, was engaged as was at the time, real estate work.

Sullivan questioned Townsend about the attitude of committee members toward Townsend.

He added that he knew of no grounds for statements in House floor and in the Townsend Weekly that "back-siding" order have been used in the inquiry.

Clements said he had not been in the House galleries when he saw Townsend.

He said he had not been in the House galleries when he saw Townsend.

OBJECTS TO QUERIES

Objecting vigorously to Sullivan's line of questioning, Townsend said "Congressmen are not to be asked questions."

Toland (D.) California, a two-senate committee member, said "Congressmen are not to be asked questions."

Chairman Bell (D.) of Missouri remarked, "This has nothing to do with the issue here."

"The objection is overruled," Townsend said.

"Yes, I want my objection recorded," Toland insisted.

Aintree, Liverpool, England, March 26 (U.S.)—An even three-thousand thoroughbred, six of them American-owned, are scheduled to go to the post tomorrow for the 98th running of the Grand National Steeplechase, the world's most dramatic and most dangerous of racing classics.

A crowd of more than 300,000 is expected to fill Aintree stands and line the rails surrounding the grueling four-mile and 686-yard course by post time Friday.

The Grand National is the world's greatest steeplechase event, and annually scores of thoroughbred racing fans from all parts of the world leave to witness the stirring battle of timber-toppers.

NOTABLES PAY LAST HONOR TO JIM SMITH

Jim Smith was laid to rest today.

Amid a tribute of grief, honor and affection from those who had been his comrades, and from those of highest position of state and county and all circles of life, his flag-draped coffin was lowered into a grave in St. Paul's Cemetery, Arlington.

Noted officials, who had known him as James J. Smith, aide and trusted reporter of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser staff, stood bowed in grief.

Followers' countless friends, mourned the passing of a companion.

Drawn up at attention, members of the American Legion, group of those Jim Smith's comrades in the war across the sea, paid a last silent tribute.

Impressive and touching.

From Our Lady of Mercy Church in Belmont, where the funeral mass was celebrated, the bier last journey to the grave was made through streets familiar to Jim from childhood, and lined with those who had known him.

A special detail, with officers from Boston, Cambridge and Arlington, stood at attention. When the cortege reached Arlington Center, where Jim had made his home for years, a North street lodging house.

EX-EMPLOYER SUES DENIAL TO GIBSON

Discovery of $600 in bills, lying loose in Harold J. Gibson's cash drawer when none should have been there, was made by George L. Woods, former Everett base collector, he testified today.

Under direct examination by John Vaughan, associate defense attorney, Woods declared that it was after office hours "sometime last April" that he made the discovery.

He called a bookkeeper in and had her stand by while he placed the money in an envelope to which he attached the name of the drawer. Woods said he testified to that he made the discovery.

Under direct examination by John Vaughan, associate defense attorney, Woods declared that it was after office hours "sometime last April" that he made the discovery.

CLAIMS BALANCE

A few evenings later he said he found $600 in the same manner.

Woods then said that next morning he asked Gibson if his petting cash was balanced, and the former casher said, "Yes." Woods said he told him to go back and check up.

Gibson went back, Woods said, and returned in a short time and repeated the statement that his books were balanced.

The Woods said he told Gibson that he had found loose money lying in the drawer. Gibson went back to his case again and then returned, saying, "Yes." Woods said he told him to go back and check up.

The money should have been paid to Gibson's cash box, and the cash box locked in the office safe, according to office procedure as outlined in testimony.

DENIES MISHANDLING

Woods' declaration followed examination by Attorney Vaughan, during which he denied any mis-handling of funds in the office.

He denied having money from Gibson on IOU's except for the $200 petty cash account, which was in Woods' possession, he denied permitting Gibson to make payments on his automobile, as previously charged.

Woods denied even that he knew Gibson was supposed to have made such payments.

In contrast to the deliberate and individual questioning of Attorney Vaughan, Assistant District Attorney M. Edward Violette cross-examination of Woods was blunt—some of his words were going back over ground covered by Vaughan, when he attributed a statement to Woods previous testimony which Woods declared he had not made.

Attorney Vaughan also insisted that the statement had not been made in testimony, and the court ordered Violette to stop cross-examining him back through his notes to check up.

LEGISLATURE TOLD TO DELAY $8,000,000 FLOOD RELIEF AID

HOPE FOR U. S. FLOODS SEEN;
$2,000,000 IS APPROVED

Massachusetts should await action of Congress before appropriating the $8,000,000 reconstruction fund advocated by Governor Curley, the legislative joint ways and means committee was told today.

State Senator Theodore R. Plunkett, chairman of the flood committee appointed by the legislature, made that recommendation. He said the committee approval of the Public Works Department budget should be voted immediately by so that emergency work could be financed out of maintenance requirements.

He said this program should work hand in hand with the $500,000 temporary bridge program already approved by both House and Senate.

$2,000,000 PROVIDED
But, Senator Plunkett declared, action on approval of funds for other work should be delayed, because within the next two weeks Congress is going to make extraordinary appropriations for flood relief and reconstruction.

It was Plunkett, who, on his return from Washington yesterday, told the state the WPA would finance reconstruction of big bridges and state highways.

The Governor immediately took issue with Senator Plunkett. He emphasized again that the Legislature should vote the entire $8,000,000.

The ways and means committee gave approval to $2,000,000 of the public works budget and the remainder of the general advisory program under consideration.

While Massachusetts and other states were thus caught in a tangle of legislation over the flood situation, Lake Champlain rose to an all-time high level at St. Albans, Vt., and covered the railroad tracks between Albany and Rouses Point.

A steadily rising wind, coupled with huge fields of ice, threatened serious damage to the Central Vermont and Rutland railroads.

Just what part the federal government will play in reconstruction work is mostly guesswork at present. But one thing is certain: With only $2,000,000 allotted to New England in government funds—one-third to Massachusetts—the grave burden of reclaiming the widespread areas of devastation is up to the citizens themselves.

JOB FOR THE CITIES
The federal government will assume the full burden of rehabilitation only in communities such as Johnstown, Pa., which were financially crushed.

So-called "prosperous" cities, such as Springfield, Holyoke, and the flood-torn mill centers of the Merrimack valley, must fight their own way out of disaster.

Announcement of restriction of WPA funds, disclosed yesterday by Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins in Washington, came as a blow to thousands of homeless persons throughout the state, who had anticipated government aid during the crucial coming months.

Facing unemployment, stripped of their property, their farms and croplands barren, they prepared nevertheless to rebuild and replant, with assistance from the more fortunate.

Elizabeth M. Herlihy, chairman of the State Planning Board, upon returning today from Washington, announced that $150,000 had been allotted by the Works Progress Administration for survey of the Stars Give Talents for Flood Relief

One of the special added attractions at the midnight flood benefit shows Saturday at the RKO-Boston and Metropolitan theaters in Joe Reichman and his Hotel Statler orchestra.

The names of additional stars and entertainers are being added hourly to the long list of stellar personalities already announced as taking part in the special midnight shows to be held next Saturday night at the Metropolitan and RKO-Boston theaters in aid of the flood sufferers.

All receipts will be turned over to the American Red Cross for relief work among the New England flood victims. The Allied Theaters of Massachusetts, under whose direction the special shows are being presented, hopes to realize a substantial sum to turn over to relief officials. All theater circuits, every theater executive and attaché, motion picture operators, electricians and stagehands are co-operating.

The regular attractions at the two respective theaters will form the nucleus for the midnight performance. The Metropolitan will offer "Springtime Frolics," featuring the comedian, Eddie Garr, on the stage, while the RKO-Boston will present the "Folies Comiques de Paris" revue.

These attractions will be augmented by personalities from the legitimate theaters, night clubs and radio, including Ray Bolger, Lavella Gear, Monty Woolley and Doris Carson from "The Yearling"; Barbara Brown and Walter N. Greer from "Personal Appearance"; Edward MacGuffin, "The Gospel Singer" of radio fame; Ted Fio Rito and his orchestra, the Three Debutantes, Muzzy Marcellino and Cocco from Levaig; Joe Reichman's orchestra from the Statler Hotel, Joe Rine and the Mayfair revue, Kaye Newman and Karle Rhode's orchestra from the Cascaes, Two Teds and many others.

Seals are now on sale at all theaters for these special midnight shows.

NEW FLOOD INVASIONS ROUT WEST VIRGINIANS, OHIOANS

Protracted flood conditions in West Virginia and Ohio today forced hundreds of families from their homes, while in Pennsylvania the end of the deluge was in sight.

The Monongahela and Allegheny rivers poured their excess waters into the Ohio river, but Pittsburgh, battered bit by last week's flood, was not affected.

At Wheeling, W. Va., however, residents digging out of the debris deposited last week encountered a second crest arrived there today.

Though falling far below the former level, the new rise was expected to inundate part of Wheeling Island and to halt trolley service in downtown Wheeling.

FEAR FOR INVASION
Riversmen said the new crest would be from 10 to 20 feet below the old, which was sweeping past Louisville, Ky., still forcing lowland residents to flee through much of its force was spent. Cincinnati and Portsmouth, O., not seriously affected, adopted watchful postures.

Other communities in Ohio and West Virginia, not protected by a wall as is Portsmouth, prepared for new invasions of muddy water.

The Red Cross estimates it would have to care for 75,000 homeless from East Liverpool to Portsmouth, Pennsylvania, and New England, which suffered huge property losses during a week of flooding.

It claimed 200 lives in the nation, sweeping down to destroy and conquer the old "robber baron," with modern methods.

Washington officials were beset with requests for relief funds to aid in rehabilitation, and plans for a huge flood control project for Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky were up.

RACKED BY U. S.
Supporters of this project, which contemplated construction of reservoirs to hold back flood waters and stagger their release into the Ohio Basin, received the backing of army engineers who estimated it would cost $85,000,000.

Small streams in Tennessee went on a rampage, leaving many families stranded, but, barring excess rainfall in other tributary valleys, the Red Cross was expected to care for the abnormal Ohio River influx without serious difficulty.

Commander Eckener will bring his new dirigible, biggest in the world, "Graf Von Helldorf," to this country, having arrived on May 6. Previously he will make, on March 30, a round trip to Rio de Janeiro. When that great ship comes pushing its way through the air the United States will learn that dirigibles are safe, are air vehicles whom you know them.

It is to be hoped our government will decide that Americans can do the thing, since the Germans can do it. We have not always been a backward people.

With "crashing" for a specialty. The big ship plans ten trips to Lakehurst this year, other trips to Brazil.

Ailing Sailor Reaches Hospital
Suffering from pneumonia, a member of the crew of the tanker Lieben was today transferred from his ship to the surf boat of the Cape Elizabeth coast guards, who rushed the victim to the Portland Marine Hospital.

The victim, John Morabian, an Austrian, has been ill since Sunday. The steamer is en route to Portland from Texas.

Kurth Is Elected
The National Association of the Sons of the American Revolution, Inc., elected William J. Kurth, of Boston, as its president at a meeting in Pittsburgh dispatches reported today.

Club to Aid American Drive

Another entertainment establishment came to the fore today to aid in the Boston Evening-American-Sunday Advertiser drive to obtain money for the use of the Red Cross in the flood-stricken area.

The Kiddie Kar, a dine and dance club at 217 Albany street, South End, will hold a Floor Heller Night tonight.

Normally there is no cover charge, and tonight there will be none for those who prefer not to pay it. But an optional charge of $1 per person will be made, the $1 to be given to the paper's Red Cross fund.

To make it just a little easier for prospective clients to give to flood sufferers this way, the Kiddie Kar will put on a big show tonight.

There will be seven or eight acts of vaudeville.

The usual service from the bar and the Kiddie Kar's increasingly ready to be available for the guests, whether flood relief or not.

The Kiddie Kar is owned and operated by Kitty Carr, mother of Boston's "Honeybee" flinger, who retired some time ago by giving a ring and a key to the club.

Individual donations to victims of the flood may be made in today.

Henry and Joseph Halper, of the Halper Loan Company, 181 Massachusetts avenue, sent $5 each to the Red Cross.

Samuel H. Zitter, of 88 Tremont street, sent $1.

And many another who understands the terrible situation through which the flood victims are going did send into their pockets to help.

PROCEEDS TO RED CROSS
The proceeds from the Boston Evening-American-Sunday Advertiser funds go each day to the Red Cross, where it is immediately converted into a helping hand for those who were impoverished by the recent flood.

Those who wish to help may do so by sending what money they can spare to the Flood Relief Editor, 3 Washington square, or direct to the Red Cross.

BRITAIN BACKS PACT
Stands by Locarno, Eden, Warns

London, March 26 (AP).—Anthony Eden, foreign secretary, told the House of Commons today the British government would back up the Locarno pact.

Many of the legislators he addressed, in a parliamentary debate on the European crisis, sought assurances that Great Britain contemplated no further commitments on the continent.

Eden pointed out that Great Britain was obligated under the Locarno treaty to guarantee that there be no aggression between Germany, France and Belgium.

"We must distinguish between what might be national sentiment and what are national obligations."

"It is likely enough that there may be people in this country who say to themselves now: In our judgment, the territories of France and Germany should be treated on exactly equal terms. It might be that the people feel that, but these are not the terms of the treaty under which we are guarantors and the treaty which has formed the main element in the security of western Europe in the last ten years."

TINKHAM Unshaken in SIEGE

RRA EVICTION FLOUTED

Washington, March 26 (INS)—Surrounded by New Dealers, both in the House and at his home, Rep. George Holden Tinkham today emerged from the first six months of his one-man siege against the Rural Resettlement Administration with his whiskers intact and his "they-can't-resettle-me" declaration unchanged.

Hailing from New England's largest seaport made famous by the Boston Tea Party, the Republican firebrand against foreign entanglements, has steadfastly refused to permit the RRA to evict him from his spacious apartment in the Arlington hotel.

There he has lived among his hunting trophies for 20 years and he says he will be living there long after

Administration. Tugwell and his settlement group have left the nation's spotlight. For six months he has held a state of siege. All around his living quarters workers hired by the government have taken

Rep. Tinkham (left) viewing prospective renters. All the other rooms in the one time hotel except Tinkham's have become offices.

Selects Help

The Bostonian appreciates the advantages of living in a government office building. He selects his own help, and enjoys service on a 24-hour restaurant.

The government's telephone operators serve as his buffer, or secretary, to all callers. To call him one must call the RRA and the operator there will put the call through to Tinkham if the latter says "O.K."

Tinkham likes people to greet him with a "good morning" every day and this he gets from the RRA's flock of pretty stenographers, who have desks not far from his apartment door.

Real Factor

He moved in when the hotel was built and leased its largest apartment for as long as he is a member of Congress.

The rent decided upon then is said to be far less than that charged for such apartments now. But this is not the main factor that has caused Tinkham to fight so hard to keep the apartment.

The real reason, he says, is the almost two-story-high ceilings in some of the rooms, which permit him to exhibit the mounted relics of his animal-hunting days and to hang his tapestries.

Police Seek Body On Boy's Story

Gloicester, March 26—Gloucester police will be forced to wait low tide tonight to check the story of young John Norris, Jr., that he saw what looked like a leg, arm and hand of a small child at the foot of Independent Wharf at low tide yesterday.

The boy was so terrified at what he saw that he failed to notify anyone of his discovery. He finally told his father this morning, who in turn notified police. Searchlighting will be employed tonight.

The Candid Camera visited the Dionne nursery just as Nurse Leroux was getting Emilie ready to join her sisters for an outdoor playtime. The resulting photographs were some of the most unusual ever taken in revealing the mannerisms of one of the "Quins." In pictures No. 1 and 2, Nurse Leroux is very gently putting on the little white shoes, while Emilie at first watches with interest and then looks up at her as they fit finely. In 3, Emilie is absorbed while Nurse Leroux slips on the new white dress, and, in No. 4, seems very well pleased about it all. Picture No. 5 shows Emilie telling the world to look at her very special spring sweater. But what's this? In No. 6, Emilie is registering a protest against her ear muffs so late in the season. But that passed very soon, as may be seen in No. 7. Last and most striking of all is No. 8, with Emilie deciding that Nurse Leroux is just about the grandest person that ever lived.

NEW ZEP Damaged But FLIES

FORCED BACK; 105 ABOARD

Friedrichshafen, Germany, March 26 (AP)—An accident marred the start of a spectacular proposed double air tour, begun this morning by Germany's two Zeppelins, as propaganda for next Sunday's Reichstag election in the Rhineland crisis.

A sudden descending air current struck the great new Zeppelin, the LZ-129, carrying its new name of "Hindenburg" for the first time, as it was being taken out of its hangar. The current forced the vertical stabilizer to the ground, damaging it seriously.

Captain Ernst A. Lehmann, who had given the signal to start the Hindenburg, and the giant airship crashed over Lake Constance for two hours while the Graf Zeppelin headed for Stuttgart.

The Hindenburg carried 105 persons and the Graf 70 persons, including their crews.

Although the facilities for maneuvering the Hindenburg appeared unaffected by the accident, Captain Lehmann decided to descend later for repairs. The new ship will resume its flight within a few hours.

The two Zeppelins will meet again over Wurttemberg, southwestern Germany, to resume their joint four-day flight around the Reich.

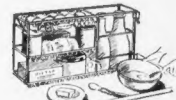

An official press communiqué did not mention the accident, merely reporting:

"It was necessary to return to Friedrichshafen to make technical replacement in connection with the tour of Germany."

The Hindenburg will start its first trip to South America March 31.

Turns BACK-shelf space to FRONT space!

SAV-A-STEP is full size of the new Stewart-Warner's convenience. It's different from the usual up. There's SAV-A-STEP, the hidden swinging shelf that appears at a touch. The TILT-SHELVES that fold away. To make room for tall bottles or other picklers. . . . the new illuminated freezing control. . . . and many more.

Models With Sav-a-Step $174.00 to $274.00

Limited quantity special 6 cu. ft. model at left $154.50

With the Slow-Cycle Mechanism That Saves!

The new Stewart-Warner runs less and costs less to operate. Because of its over-size, heavy-duty construction and slow-cycle principle, it runs less frequently, saving current and wear on the mechanism. It is so precisely built (like the Stewart-Warner speedometer on your car) that it runs with amazing quietness. Come in and see it.

PLANES DIP AS FRIENDS BOW OVER JIM SMITH'S GRAVE

many years, neighbors and friends were gathered in grieving tribute. Impressive and touching was the first expression of devotion paid to Jim by his friends in all walks of life.

Leading the procession was Governor Curley, accompanied by Mayor Joseph P. Murphy and Assistant General William I. Rose. Escorting the Governor's car were Police Commissioner McEweney, Superintendent of Police King and Lieutenant O'Day.

STATE FLAG
Above one of the flower-heaped cars was the state flag, a gift of Governor Curley. A score of high state and city officials were in the vanguard of the procession.

At the grave, four officers, in tribute to Jim, lifted the flag as the casket was lowered. They were Commissioner of Insurance Francis J. DeCola and three fellow-workers, James P. McEweney, Francis C. McLean and William J. Conway of the Boston American staff.

Rev. Edward J. Farrell read the prayers of the solemn burial service, both requested by Mrs. Charles A. Maguire.

The solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Father Farrell, an uncle of the deceased; Rev. Charles Sheridan, assistant pastor of St. Michael's, and Father Maguire, rector.

Miss Edith Shaugnessy was organist; Miss Alice Farrell, contralto; Mrs. Joseph M. Kirby, soprano; and Victor Mahan, tenor. As an escort of honor, a detail of Boston mounted police, led by Lieutenant Edward B. Gale, accompanied the procession to the church, along Belmont street.

Other special detail of Boston police, assigned by Police Commissioner Eugene M. McEweney, stood guard under leadership of Lieutenant John T. O'Day.

GOVERNOR ATTENDS
Chief of Police John J. O'Brien of Belmont had assigned a detail of Belmont officers to escort the Boston police.

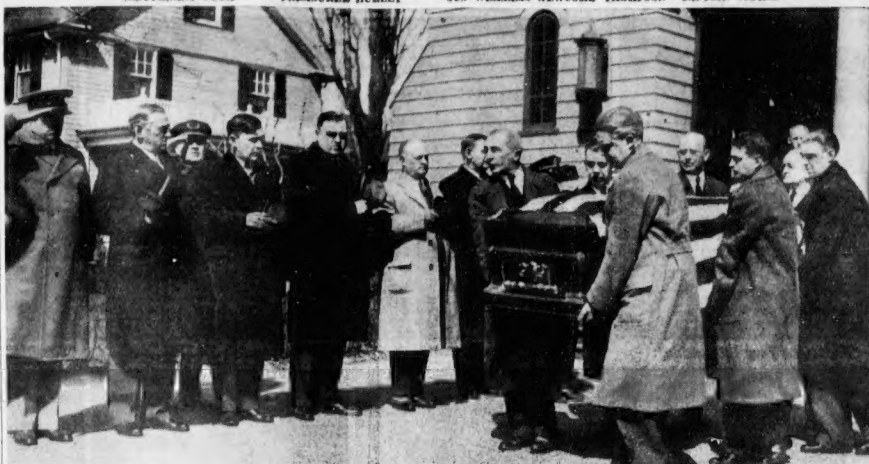

As the flag-draped casket was borne into the church, an honor guard of members of Cambridge Post 27, American Legion, and Commander Michael T. Kelleher in charge, stood at attention.

In the vanguard of the funeral procession was Governor Curley, with his military escort. Other officials of prominence attending the service were: State Treasurer Charles B. Hurley, state auditor Thomas H. Buckley, state auditor Francis X. Hurley, John Buckus, secretary to Governor Curley, Police Commissioner Correll Arthur T. Lyman, assistant Commissioner of Correction Daniel P. Neuhart, former chief of the Public Safety, Commissioner of Correction Arthur T. Lyman, assistant Commissioner of Correction Daniel P. 'Guest Staff' On American Respect and admiration and deep affection can staff a good newspaper. It was proved today.

The respect, the admiration and the love that Jim Smith inspired during his brilliant career on this newspaper, staffed this newspaper today so that comrades could pay him final tribute and bear him to his last rest.

Volunteers reporters and review men, some of them utter strangers to the Boston Evening American editorial rooms, all of them sports men, volunteered, helped publish this paper so Jim Smith's fellow workers could attend his funeral.

FOR JIM SMITH
It was spontaneous, uncalculated, it was the love that Jim Smith inspired in the profession—a generous and sincere desire to help a man whose death inspired it.

Only a skeleton of the regular staff remained on duty; those who should have been at their posts, taking the places of the others bent on the sorrowful mission came in from newspapers and women, present members of the staff of the contemporary papers, to turn their hands for a little while at the work Jim Smith loved for the first time.

Many of these were his intimate friends, too; all of them, except for the generous thing, would have been at the church and graves today.

THANKS TO THESE
The Boston Evening American wishes to thank George McLean, Jr., of the Boston Globe; Nat Barrows of the Boston Globe; Frank McGrath of the Yankee Tribune; John Allen of the Boston Globe; Kelly Donovan of the Boston Daily Record and Charles A. Coyne, director of publicity, Boston Chamber of Commerce, who generously pitched in to help so that those who worked with Jim Smith could say a last farewell.

Goodwin Asks Speeding Arrests

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin today asked police chiefs throughout the state to tighten up on all persons driving at unreasonable rates of speed and report them to the registry to be taken off the road.

In a letter to all police chiefs Goodwin said: "From my records it is apparent that the principal cause of the accidents during March, respectively in the latter part of the month, is speed—too much speed. 'Strict, impartial law enforcement and punishment are the only things that will stop these speed-maniacs from mowing down people in the streets. I ask you to tighten up on these persons.'"

A FLYING GOOD-BYE

Seven Planes in Jim Smith Tribute
By GEORGE HANBLIN
We flew for Jim Smith today.

We circled over his grave, made pictures and said good-bye to Jim. I don't mean that there was one airplane over the cemetery.

There were seven. Three were from the U. S. Army, two from the National Guard and two from the late Airline and Shobe Airlines.

Was flying with Al Lachowich, of Shobe Airlines. Eddie Stephan, Boston Evening American's "Flying Photographer," was flying with Charlie Sutherland, of Inter-City Airlines.

"When Al and I arrived over the cemetery, we saw a long, black, thin, long string of automobiles moving down Massachusetts avenue, headed for St. Paul's cemetery.

The army planes, flown by Captain E. M. Fairhead, commanding the flight, Lieutenant L. H. Bidwell and Lieutenant G. L. Goren, were circling the cemetery.

The plane of the 26th Division Aviation, M. N. C. Goren by Captain E. Stanley Beck, leading the aviators formation, and Lieutenant Theodore Baker, were 500 feet above the army ships.

Slowly, oh so slowly, the suites in the funeral cortege wound in the side street from Massachusetts avenue, toward the burial ground.

Meanwhile, overhead dived the motes of the seven planes. Lechard and I stayed at 200 feet, in order to give the army and national guard planes a chance to do their stuff in formation, and also to give Charlie Sutherland a chance to take Eddie Stephan low enough to make pictures.

Finally, the funeral cortege reached the grave, and the casket was lifted out by the pallbearers, all of whom worked with Jim for years, just as I have.

The army formation, and the national guard formation came swinging back over the cemetery, and dipped their wings just as the body was being lowered.

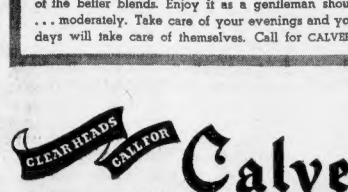

Eddie Stephan was flying as low as the law allows at the time, making a few final pictures.

From 200 feet, Lechard, at my bidding, dropped the nose, cut the gun and dived over the grave. As we reached the bottom of the dive, 100 feet, we gunned the engine three times, waggled the wings and climbed.

As we climbed, I looked back over the left rear window and said aloud: "So long, Jim, Happy Landings to you, pal."

The last my gambol, but his sight does quickly things (no story). He just as well as be, tonight—Tomorrow, just as likely!

Frolic tonight without frowning tomorrow! Use good judgment. Buy better whiskey. Call for CALVERT, best of the better blends. Enjoy it as a gentleman should... moderately. Take care of your evenings and your days will take care of themselves. Call for CALVERT!

WPA LAUNCHES SALEM PROBE ON GRAVES

Salem, March 26.—Investigation for WPA Administrator Daniel W. Mahoney today started an inquiry into the charges—already heard by Mayor George P. Bates—about WPA workers, digging in the city-owned Greenwood cemetery, desecrated several graves.

One of the first to be questioned was Harry White, supervisor of the project.

CASNET EXPOSED

It was charged that the WPA workers, in modernizing the cemetery, allowed away part of the graves of a G. A. R. veteran and left the casnet exposed. Another charge was that a wooden plank had been driven into the ground so that it pierced a casnet.

These specific charges are in addition to others which were made public. The alleged desecrations took place last winter.

VISITORS BARRED

Mayor Bates called for an investigation yesterday after 500 women, headed by Mrs. Mrs. Trask, a Gold Star mother, protested in front of conditions at the cemetery. In addition to the charges of desecration, they claimed that a large portion of the cemetery had been barred to visitors during the work of modernization.

Today and every day you will find excellent used cars advertised of the American and American.

Sylvia Sidney To Ask Divorce

Star's
Love
On Rocks

Los Angeles, March 26 (AP)—The Morning Examiner says a divorce suit will be filed today by Sylvia Sidney, screen star, against Bennett Cerf, New York book publisher.

The proceeding has been contemplated by the actress since she announced a separation recently because of "differences in temperament."

It was not learned what grounds would be cited, but the complaint was drawn yesterday by Martin Gump, Hollywood attorney, the Examiner says.

Cerf and Miss Sidney live in Phoenix, Ariz., last October for their wedding. On parting, both denied an interest in any other person caused the rift.

"We just found that things did not click," said the petite film player.

In a divorce suit filed yesterday, another film player, blonde Helen Twelvetrees, accused Frank C. Woody, wealthy sportsman, of interfering with her career by his jealousy.

Her action was filed on the 15th anniversary of her marriage. They separated last January.

The film star asked custody of her three-year-old son, Jack, but no mention was made of provisions for his support.

G. W. HEFFMAN TESTS LADDER IN ATTIC

The Hauptmann defense fought the ladder ladder all through the Fleming trial and have repeatedly attacked it since, charging that the important fall in "Frankie" against Hauptmann and that the ladder itself was not used in the kidnapping, but "planted" at the Lindbergh Hospital estate as a false clue.

The attack on the fall 10 nail-bolts was based on the testimony of Dr. Erasmus Hudson, New York physician and fingerprint expert, who said he noticed only one nail-bolt when he processed the ladder for fingerprints a few weeks after the kidnapping.

The prosecution rebuttal to this testimony was a photograph of the ladder taken shortly after the kidnapping. It showed four nailbolts in all.

FILED REPORT
Harold R. Betts, an expert in the U. S. forest service for 20 years, testified he had examined the ladder carefully in May, 1932, and filed a report on it. The report recorded four nail bolts in all.

Koehler was recalled and he told how he had disassembled the ladder more than two years before Hauptmann's arrest and his diagram showed four nailbolts.

Since the trial Robert W. Heikel, investigator, has examined the Hauptmann attic and was reported to have said that violent ray tests threw doubt on the authenticity of the attic's nailbolts testimony.

Reprieve Reported
Certain for Bruno

Trenton, N. J., March 26 (INS)—The belief was becoming more pronounced in authoritative circles here today that Bruno Richard Hauptmann will not go to the electric chair Tuesday night, as scheduled, in spite of Governor Harold G. Hoffman's latest statement that he would issue no new reprieve.

Surprised Hoffman
Spurns Jaffie Terms

New York, March 26 (AP)—A close personal friend of Dr. John F. Condon's expressed surprise today at the objections voiced by Governor Harold Hoffman to complying with the Lindbergh intermediary's stipulations for an interview.

Dr. Condon was absent on business from his Bronx home today and could not be reached for comment on the governor's announcement that he would refuse to meet Dr. Condon at his home and was unwilling to submit his questions in writing.

The friend, who refused to permit the use of his name, commented on the governor's statement that he telegraphed Dr. Condon for an interview after attempting to arrange a meeting through a newspaper publisher and Attorney General David T. Wilentz.

"I am amused at the governor's use of a magazine publisher as an intermediary when he could have in touch with the doctor through a postal card."

The friend said that he brought no messages from the governor when he paid Dr. Condon a "social visit" at his home last week, or at any other time.

"The first and only message the doctor received from the governor was answered in three hours."

The friend said he was "surprised" at Governor Hoffman's announced objections to seeing Dr. Condon at the latter's home. He said the governor in his telegram asking for an interview or clear up certain aspects of the Hauptmann case, had agreed to meet Jaffie any place in New York.

The friend said no further word had been received from the governor.

Signing of Lease Assures New Air Base

Governor's Island in Boston harbor will become, in the next few months, a transatlantic airplane base and the first line of air defense base in this section.

This was made possible today when Mayor Mansfield signed a lease with the War Department for a period of 50 years at an annual rental of $1 per year.

Pace department surveys will begin surveys tomorrow morning following the movement of which will level off the 70 acres on Governor's Island with the residue of dirt being used to fill in between the island and the East Boston airport.

ADD NEW HANGARS
Under present plans, a 3000 foot runway will be immediately constructed on Governor's Island with provisions for blind flying for transatlantic traffic and emergency landings through radio navigation.

Army hangars at the East Boston Airport will be moved to Governor's Island, where new and up-to-date hangars will be added, making the Army unit one of the most defense units in the country.

The East Boston Airport will be strictly commercial field and, with the fill between it and Governor's Island, Boston will stand in the vanguard of airplane travel in the United States.

For the purpose of leveling off Governor's Island Mayor Mansfield announced that federal aid in the form of War Department appropriations will be had, and he declared that the lease would be signed until the entire project is completed.

Black Snow
St. Paul, March 26 (INS)—Black snow fell in Minnesota today.

Pleased by G. O. P. Support

Schuster to Meet Landon Organizer

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Expressing himself as pleased with the support that the rank and file of Republicans in general in Massachusetts is giving to the presidential candidacy of Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Winfield A. Schuster of East Douglas, member of the Governor's Council, today departed for Washington to confer with John Hamilton, Landon organizer.

Schuster, some weeks ago, made a pilgrimage to Topeka, and while there became an enthusiastic supporter of the "Coolidge of the West."

"There is no doubt that Governor Landon has captured the fancy of the great rank and file of the G. O. P. in Massachusetts," Schuster declared. "Every indication is that while the Republican delegation from this state to the national convention in Cleveland will go unopposed, a majority of the delegates will be for Landon."

"Many of the candidates for delegates in the April primary are openly for Landon, and I feel certain that the voters will be on the watch for these when marking their ballots. The voters of course are entitled to know how a candidate stands. Otherwise they can't be expected to mark their ballots intelligently."

That voters may get a mental picture of the man whose personality and achievements have made him the outstanding figure in the nation, Councillor Schuster said. Governor Landon is 46 years old, slightly below average height, somewhat stocky, white haired, solid and substantial, and very impressive in appearance. He suggests more the professional type rather than the politician.

A graduate of the University of Kansas, he has been in the oil business for years with his father as an independent operator. This is a drilling and prospecting business and the oil to add to the larger companies. The present Mrs. Landon is his second wife, the first having died some years previously.

Schuster asserted that the position of Governor Landon is rather unique in that he has had no campaign manager, views his own availability with calmness and will not "batter cabinet jobs" to obtain the nomination.

He believes, Schuster continued, that the country faces a great crisis in its history, worse than that of the Civil War, because of the class against class element.

"TEN YEARS OUT OF LIFE" Governor Landon has been quoted as saying that if all these circumstances no man could expect to become president as it will take 10 years from his life, for the man who does the job that will have to be done, must be prepared to be unpopular for a while and run much danger to his life.

To the mind of Governor Landon the speaker said, the issue is clear and that issue is whether America is to continue to be a nation of slaves or a free nation. He has known it. Allied with this, he stated, is financial stability and the necessity of governmental economy.

Schuster pointed out that when Landon became governor of Kansas in 1932, the Republican party was split and the Democratic party was strong. Yet, he said, Landon carried the state by 5000 votes through there with a majority of 65,000. In 1934, he was re-elected by a majority of 60,000 and in that campaign spoke in every one of the 105 counties.

Canal Fund Rebuff Reflects U. S. Revolt on Spending

By GEORGE BOWEN BROWN

Washington, March 26.—The re-buff which President Roosevelt has received in the withholding by Congress of all funds for further work on his Florida canal project, reflects an increasing susceptibility in the country at large against flood-fighting spending.

The predicament into which this places the President grows partly out of the written words of the $4,800,000 law, and what might be called the unwritten law of the act. Under this law none of the money may be expended after June 30, 1937, except when such expenditure is necessitated by actual contractual obligations.

The Florida canal project is so vast in scope that obviously it was impossible to contract for full for its completion by June 30 of next year.

When the $4,800,000 bill was before the House appropriations committee it was the main understanding of that committee that no project would be begun that could not be completed prior to June 30, 1937. Obviously the canal could not be.

Rare Roman Relics Shown By Hearst

Oakland, Cal., March 26 (UPI)—Four rare marble busts of Roman emperors, have been loaned to the California spring show by William Randolph Hearst, it was announced today.

They will be displayed in niches cut in tall hedge walls surrounding a facsimile of a fountain at Versailles as part of the "chateau garden" motif of the show, to be held at the Exposition building here, April 2 to 5.

The busts lent by Mr. Hearst were made by leading artists of the Louis XIV period, contemporary to the era set for the background of the display.

The entrance to the chateau garden, of which the Versailles vista will be a part, will lead through a traditional French market place, Butler B. Sturtevant, show president, announced.

The company paid bonuses of from 5 to 8% per cent of their pay to workers after each quarter of last year.

FCC REVERSAL RULING BARED

Washington, March 26 (US)—By aiding the Black senatorial committee in contacting private telegrams, the federal communications commission reversed the flat ruling of its general counsel that such procedure is illegal. It was revealed today.

The opinion was rendered a year ago by Paul D. P. Spearman, then general counsel of the FCC, when the securities and exchange commission sought to use private telegrams, records, and the Department of Justice sought to seize both telephone and telegraph messages.

Spearman's ruling was adopted by the commissioners, who thereupon refused to make available private correspondence sought by the securities commission.

Spearman held that to do so would violate statutes against unreasonable search and seizure.

The ruling was reversed last fall when the commission joined with the Black committee in a raid on private telegrams in its alleged "raid of terror."

Today the FCC refused to make the Spearman opinion public. The FCC and the Black committee are joint defendants in an injunction suit brought by William Randolph Hearst to restrain further seizure of messages and force return of those already taken.

The commission also refused to state on what grounds it had changed its previous opinion as to validity of blanket subpoenas, through which the Black committee was able to look over millions of private telegrams.

PROGRESS UNDER FIRE

Under fire in Congress and the courts for their activities, the Black brothers today returned to the Western Union all telegrams they seized between W. J. Cowley, the Cowles Publishing Company, the Spokane Chronicle, Washington Farmer, Oregon Farmer and the Idaho Farmer.

All telegrams sent and received by Cowley and the publications during most of last year were seized November 24, and court action for their return had been contemplated. The Black committee did not state whether it had made and retained copies of the confiscated telegrams.

The House will take up on Friday the Smith bill requiring registration of lobbyists.

Meanwhile the National Association of Women Lawyers protest the wholesale confiscation of private telegrams.

McBain Dubious on Court Ruling

Dr. Howard Lee McBain, constitutional authority, told Boston University students in the annual Beacon lecture that the Supreme Court should not be concerned with wisdom of a dubious law, but solely with its constitutionality.

Said Dr. McBain: "Under any rational theory of the function of the courts in the exercise of judicial review of legislation, the judges have no business to concern themselves with the goodness or badness of the law's policy. Their concern should be solely with the question of the power to enact the law."

In discussing judicial review, Dr. McBain cited the recent TVA ruling as one case where the justices were not swayed by their own economic and social views.

Miss Barbara E. Drayton of Warley, Penn., Pa., great-granddaughter of Commodore Percival Drayton, Civil War officer, in whose honor the vessel is named, will christen the destroyer.

The 1500-ton destroyer Lamson, sister ship of the Drayton, is under construction here.

Myrna Loy Is Sought For Film Lead

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal

Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, March 26.—Myrna Loy hurried down from Lake Arrowhead, where she was vacationing, to read the script of "To Mary, With Love." So many people had said that the story might have been written for Myrna that Darryl Zanuck is trying to borrow her from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to star in this year which John Cromwell will direct.

The Myrna Loy trade is possible through 20th Century-Fox permitting MGM to have Janet Gaynor for "Small Town Girl." All the studios are trading talent these days and even the big gas stars are included in the bargaining. Jean Harlow, for example, has been borrowed from Columbia and Don Ameche, new comer to the screen, makes his debut in this year.

nomination for stardom. I speak now of C. Aubrey Smith whose work in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" certainly entitles him to recognition. What an actor he is! Little Freddie Bartholomew attends this choir and so does Dolores Costello Barrymore both of whom worked with him in the Scenic picture and both of whom believe there is no finer actor in Hollywood. We have had Theodore Roberts and other noted character stars. After all, Mr. Smith is 75 years old, and all the star awards shouldn't exclusively belong to the younger players.

Snapshots of Hollywood

CLARK GABLE with a grand fan, back from a four-day vacation at ocean-side; AL JOHNSON's picture, "The Singing Fool," opening in 340 cities the same day; DOLores Costello Barrymore and CEDRIC GIBBONS off by plane for New York today; they take a stop for Europe in a few days; at the airport to wish them bon voyage were MARLENE DIETRICH, LILLI DAMITA and ERROL FLYNN.

DICK POWELL with a desert too looks very well despite his laryngitis; Hollywood divided on "The Great Ziegfeld," CHARLES L. CLARYS LINN's approaching marriage to Mrs. Sheehan; the "World Awaits" will make one musical under the supervision of her husband.

Now the truth comes out. Fred MacMurtry who has been warbling on the set and studying voice like mad is to be costared with Carole Lombard in a musical comedy called "Swing Your Partner." Well, Miss Carole (with apologies to Flanders) who nicknamed her has been taking a few private vocal lessons, too, so that when Arthur Hersholt, Paramount producer, came ready to put this musical on the screen, she too will be ready for the Ralph Bangor musical and Oscar Hammerstein, II, libretto.

Chatter in Hollywood. This John Hewitt, who will marry Colleen Moore as soon as her divorce from Al Scott becomes final, is a pretty smart idea. The commercialization of Colleen's doll house was his idea and now he has another little idea that ought to net him a pretty penny. He has signed the puns and the deer of "Sequent" farm, the lion in Tarzan, and about sixty-four other famous movie animals and he will take them out on the road. Can't you just see the interest this will create among the youngsters? Colleen is now in Des Moines with the doll house and Hewitt talks her every day.

I want to make a personal

Noted Play Plot on Screen

Boston couldn't see "The Children's Hour." The famous play was banned. Not that a play can be banned officially in Boston, but it is.

But official disapproval was registered so vehemently in an off-the-record manner that Producer Herman Shumlin decided it would be the better part of valor—and economy—not to bring the play in Boston, and so this the Shubert interests, which operate the theater for which "The Children's Hour" was booked, concurred.

Tomorrow, at Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters, "The Children's Hour," in an expurgated version that is an slightly different from the original text that the play's personality remains, will be no view.

The title of the picture version is "These Three" and Miss Hopkins, Marie Oberon and Joel McCrea form the triple-star combination which Producer Samuel Goldwyn has engaged to intrigue the public.

Lillian Hellman wrote "The Children's Hour," and she is the author also of the screen play. At first Miss Hellman was given no recognition as author of the celluloid script. Along the line something has occurred which permits Miss Hellman to be credited now with authorship at both play and film.

The story of "These Three" deals with the problem child of a New England small private school. The youngster is brilliant in every way. She whips the institution and shreds a romance between Mr. McCrea and one of the teachers.

At first Miss Hellman, former musical comedy writer, plays the part of the troublesome child.

Portrays Gold-Rush Pioneer

With a picture credit to the screen, the story of the gold-rush pioneer will begin a new chapter in the history of the stage when it is presented at the Metropolitan Opera House tomorrow night.

The play, "Sutter's Gold," is a story of the life of James W. Wadsworth, a pioneer of the gold-rush era. It is a story of the struggle for survival in a hostile environment, of the search for fortune and the ultimate triumph of the human spirit.

The play is a masterpiece of drama, with a story that is both gripping and inspiring. It is a story that will move the hearts of all who see it, and it is a story that will live on in the memory of all who have seen it.

Flood Waters Rise

Montpelier, Vt., Man Keeps Chin
Above Icy Torrent

By Floyd Gibbons

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Well, sir, I thought I'd seen or read of every kind of adventure there was, but when a guy faces death by drowning on the top shelf of a store—well—I throw up the sponge, that's all, and admit that Old Dane Nature's supply of thrills is inexhaustible.

ARCHIE LEVESQUE, of 9 Blackwell street, Montpelier, Vt., is today's Distinguished Adventurer—the Man on the Top Shelf of our story. And if anybody ever talks about putting Archie "on the shelf" again, he's just going to quit the party right then and there. After one taste of that elevated perch, Arch doesn't want another.

It all came about in the winter of 1927 when a big thaw and rainstorm hit Montpelier. The river rose and was running all over town. By four o'clock in the afternoon, the business section looked like Venice without the gondolas, and all the boys at the store where Archie worked, began removing goods from show cases and piling it up on shelves where it wouldn't get wet.

By six o'clock those lads were standing in four feet of water, and Archie phoned his mother not to expect him home that night as he couldn't swim that far. He worked until quarter after seven standing on a showcase and passing stuff to the shelves, and then the whole crew decided they'd better think of getting out themselves before the still rising water made it impossible.

By that time the water was up to their shoulders. It was ice-cold, too, but they waded through it to the back door. There was a strong current pushing against the other side, but the three of them managed to get it open. Archie held it with a board while Otto Guilliani and Vernon Conlin slipped through to the hall that led upstairs to the second floor. Then he started to go through himself, but Old Lady Adventure never meant Archie to get through that doorway—and he didn't.

The door suddenly slammed shut with a bang. He heard a pile of heavy boxes tumble from the farther wall of the next room and lodge against the other side. Archie knew he'd never get that door open again, and he didn't even try. He turned around and swam through the chink water to the front of the store. His only chance now, as far as he could see, was to swim through the transom of the front door and climb up the front of the house. But on second thought he abandoned the idea. Out front was a raging current. If he ever missed his hold he'd be swept away and drowned.

"In other years," says Archie, "I had seen the water come up, time and again, to a depth of one or two feet, and recede as quickly as it had come. I was expecting it to go down any minute, but instead, as I watched the wall, I noted a steady rise. I was still standing on the showcase, trying to figure out where all the water had come from when I noticed a number of rats swimming from one shelf to another. There were dozens of them popping up in the water—slimy, hairy, crawling things that had been driven out of their holes in the cellar by the flood. At the sight of them I climbed to the highest shelf in the store, and lay down full length on it, less than a foot from the ceiling."

And there Archie lay—as high as he could go—and watched the water creep up on him. It was only then that he realized the nature of the trap he was in. He began to wish he had gone through the transom and taken his chances with the current. Better to drown in the open than under a dank plaster ceiling, like one of the rats that were caught with him. But it was too late to try that now. Already the transom was under water.

Inch by inch the water crept on. Archie began looking at the ceiling over his head. If he could crack through the plaster there'd be another foot of space above it—space that would prolong his life. He might even cut his way through to the rooms above, if he could find the proper tools.

By that time there was eight feet of water in the store. Boxes, show-cases and everything movable, was floating about on the surface of finding anything in that mess. There was one show-case down there, though, that was fastened to the floor. It was full of playing cards, pencils, tablets and crayons, but Archie remembered that there were a couple flashlights in there, too. He slipped off his shelf and dived in the cold, dirty water. He came up choking, but in his hand was a big, three-cell spotlight.

The rats were taking refuge on Archie's shelf now, but he paid no attention to them. With his flashlight he attacked the ceiling. It was long, hard work, but at last he had made an opening that would accommodate his body. He was getting ready to crawl up between the lathe and the floor when he heard someone in the room above him call, "Who's there?"

It was Charley Booth, who had come down from the third story, where all the occupants of the house had gathered, and heard Archie's pounding. It was only a few minutes after that that someone had sawed a hole in the ceiling and pulled Archie up through it.

Archie says that after a cup of hot coffee he had almost forgotten his troubles when someone reported that the water was up over the first floor ceiling and still rising. Then his knees sort of went all weak under him and, as he sat, safe and sound, in a third floor window watching barns and sheds and dog houses float down the street, he wondered what would have happened if he'd had that idea hammering through the ceiling just a few minutes later, or if Charley Booth hadn't heard him.

They found a couple of drowned rats on that top shelf when the water went down the next day.

Shoot along those true adventure yarns, boys and girls, and collect your dough.

LEWIS HANEY ON LABOR

Profit Motive ONLY SURE WAY TO Restore Jobs

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, March 26.—From a Detroit man I receive a letter containing requests for more specific information bearing on my article of March 20.

In that article I quoted Mr. Roosevelt's statement that "there is little evidence that employers by individual and unco-ordinated action can absorb large numbers of new employees." I further stated that this statement smacked of Socialism or Fascism.

1.—My correspondent's first inquiry is: How do you arrive at such a conclusion?

My point is that the President's statement amounts to an attack upon the system of individual initiative or private enterprise. In the first place, it is entirely implicit that individual action means "unco-ordinated" action. In the second place, it implies that the only way to get any large amount of new employment is to substitute government action and "social planning" for what he calls "individual and unco-ordinated action."

This means the adoption of a system of employment which is either Socialistic or Fascist.

Those of us who are the value of the system of individual initiative hold that it leads to the most effective sort of co-operation and co-ordination. We deny that either a Socialist state or a Fascist dictator can organize industrial life as efficiently or provide as much productive employment as can business men in their quest for profit.

2.—The second question is, "What evidence do you have?"

The first evidence is that in all other depressions, great and small, individual action has brought recovery and restored or increased employment. It did so in the 1815-25 and in the 1873-78 depressions. Why not now?

The second evidence is, as the President himself indicates in another statement, that private enterprise has already greatly increased employment, despite the handicaps he has imposed. (The slow decline in reported unemployment appears to be due to the encouragement offered by the New Dealers to accept government relief.)

3.—He wants to know where in New Mexico the New Dealers have been building a road that goes from nowhere to nowhere. I suggest, sir, that you examine the road projected from Rio Hondo to Placitas in Tazoo County, and the various projects in Catron County. In these sparsely populated areas, where there is no employment problem, the New Dealers are squandering hundreds of thousands of dollars on needless roads that cannot possibly pay.

4.—He refers to my statement that this sort of thing wastes the labor of the men and our money, and he asks if I know anything better to do?

Yes, I do. It is to encourage individual enterprise, to the end that really productive employment may be given by private employers.

CASH GRAINS DECLINE

The price trend in the various commodity markets was again highly irregular.

Cash grains declined sharply, following an extended period of stagnation when flour, coffee, butter and other commodities were higher.

On the other hand, cotton advanced, and sugar, which had been in a weak position, improved.

New York, March 26.—Flood damage to Warner Bros. Pictures is not expected to be more than $100,000, an official of the corporation stated.

The chief loss, he declared, would come from loss of a building through closed theaters, but the flood district involved only a dozen theaters out of four hundred, the loss is not likely to make much display in the income account.

Losses are expected to be kept to a minimum by the corporation's insurance policy.

N. E. POWER

Financing POSTPONED By Food RAIL SHARES ALSO RALLY

By Hugh E. Bradshaw
Dislocation of New England business after the flood was not limited to industry and commerce, as it was directly responsible for the postponement of N. E. Power's refinancing program.

Frank D. Comerford, chairman of the board of directors, notified the S. E. C. today that the company's organization had been subjected to such terrific stresses that it has not been possible to work out the details of the plan.

This does not mean that the N. E. Power Association will abandon its financing on a permanent loan basis of all outstanding obligations and Mr. Comerford says that the company is now actively at work on the plan which was the original object of the plan was to obtain the outstanding 50 per cent debentures.

We have heard quite often of late that conditions in the hide and leather markets were decidedly optimistic. While speculation in the tiremen's writer is convinced that the industry is not yet out of the woods, he is not so sure of the outlook for the continued improvement in the hide and leather markets. He is not so sure of the outlook for the continued improvement in the hide and leather markets.

Comments of Brokers

A bulge in utilities appears a high probability, and the market is expected to be a general trading policy, but will still the current market.

BULLISH RAID ON MOTORS MEN CALLED BY Trade

By B. C. Forbes
The type of man selected of his kind in the world is significant, especially to American youths.

Leroy A. Lincoln, 35, newly elected president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, is a college-bred, whereas his predecessor, Frederick H. Eckert, began as an office boy with the company when 15.

Fewer and fewer men of meager schooling are now chosen to direct the destinies of great American enterprises. These still remain towering giants who did not receive university education.

Henry Ford is perhaps the most famous of these. He began as a farm boy, had very little schooling, and was a mechanic. He was a genius rather than a scholar, and his genius enabled him to reach the heights of industrial achievement.

Backwardness

Strangely enough, the upturn of 1.25 per cent in the industrial index negotiated in the face of backwardness in such important groups as steel, chemicals, and farm products.

While so-called rehabilitation programs have been drafted, the fact remains that the company was not participating in the industry's improvement.
